Associating with a Believer Who Neglects to Perform His Canonic Prayers - 28 /Nov/ 2019

question| If we know that a person does not perform his canonic prayers, is it permissible to go to his house and benefit from his wealth?

answer| Associating with a person who fails to perform his canonic prayers and benefitting from his wealth are permissible so long as we are not thereby condoning his misdeed. However, the duty to enjoin good and forbid evil requires one to disassociate from him if doing so would compel him to carry out his religious obligation and perform his canonic prayers.
