Question: If there is a wound or fracture in the organs of wuqu' without any dressing/bandage, how should one perform wuqu'?

Answer: If the wound is najis, it should be washed with water before performing wuqū'. If the water does not harm it, wash it normally during wuqū'. But if it is harmful to wash it, then during wuqū', you should wash the area around it and by caution, pass wet hand on it if it is not harmful. If it is najis, one should put a clean cloth on it and pass wet hand on it. Of course, if there is a wound on the place of mash and he cannot pass wet hand on it, he should perform tayammum instead of wuqū'. But if he is able to put a cloth on the wound and pass hand on it, it is a caution that he performs wuqū' with such a mash in addition to tayammum.
